

Places of Christian Worship 1914-1990: A Selection of Christian Places of Worship

ELAIN HARWOOD & ANDREW FOSTER

This list is arranged by architect, with cross-referencing where necessary. Some churches appear under more than one heading, if they occupy important places in the work of two practices, though this has been kept to a minimum. Works of restoration, rather than rebuilding, are not included. Neither are unbuilt schemes, though demolished churches are – suitably noted where known. Fixtures and fittings are not included. Though every attempt has been made to give an accurate address for each location, the recent reorganisation into unitary authorities may still cause some confusion and old 'counties' have been inserted where clarification may be thought helpful.

The order for each entry is as follows: denomination, dedication, address, date, date of other work (and of later work by other architects), listing status. Buildings not otherwise noted belong to the Church of England, Church in Wales or Church of Scotland in their respective countries. Dates are, where possible, those of construction rather than of design and may thus differ from those given in other works. Where the designer is not a qualified architect this has been noted.

The listing system is also different in different countries. In England and Wales grades I and II* denote buildings of international or major national significance in their type; grade II is the designation of special architectural interest into which some 90% of listings fall. Until 1974 churches had their own listing classification: A for major medieval or Georgian works; B for good examples of these and Victorian works; C for the rest. Since 1974 the conventional I, II* and II used for secular buildings in England and Wales has been adopted for churches also. Scotland has its own system of A, B and C (Statutory), where A is roughly equivalent to grades I and II*, B to grade II, and C is used for buildings listed primarily for group value. The Department of the Environment in Northern Ireland has a system of A, B+ and B which is otherwise similar to the English one.

The date 1914 has not been strictly adhered to. Where a church of 1914 belongs within the great tradition of Edwardian building it has not been included. But certain architects who straddle the boundary of the Great War are too important to miss out, so that all churches by Sir Giles Gilbert Scott and Sir Charles Nicholson are included – especially as so many of their early works had long building campaigns. With many other architects, including Temple Moore, W.D. Caröe and a number of Scottish architects, it has proved necessary to be more strict as most of their works fits into the earlier period. An effort has been made to include as many churches as possible from the years 1915-39, and to be more selective thereafter, particularly from 1970 onwards.

The C20 Society would like to thank English Heritage for its generous grant towards this project. The list was compiled by Andrew Foster and Elain Harwood, with help from Peter Arnold, Geoff Brandwood, Alan Brooks, Martin Cherry, Neville Doe, Eleanor Gawne, Pam Gray, Edward Holland, Roland Jeffery, Jill Kerry, Deborah Mays, Richard Morrice, Alan Powers, Martin Purdy and Peter Smith. Geoff Brandwood and Roland Jeffery edited the text. We would like to thank the many incumbents, churchwardens and enthusiasts who contacted the C20 Society about their churches following the 1997 exhibition The Twentieth Century Church.
